Pres report

Hurray! We're out of the bubble! What a crazy time that was.

For some of us nothing much will change, but to those up the hill, enjoy your first surf!

It looks like we might be back once we hit 80%, so here's hoping we can have a November pointscore! I will send an announcement out via email and Facebook if we're on.

If its on, you will need to show your vax cert at registration.

Club News

AGM

The AGM is to be held before our November Pointscore. Along with myself, Darcy has notified the committee that he will not be standing as treasurer next year. He is having a major shoulder operation and will be out of the water for majority of the year.

So saying that, time to start thinking about taking on a role, talking with your mates.

Without a committee the club does not run, so give consideration to offering your services and being a part of the team.

You might not believe it, but its actually fun!

It should be a pretty easy year, and the committee are trying to get all the big jobs done now, so it'll be a breeze.

Killer is also taking a break from newslettering so if your keen to pump it out each month stick ya hand up.

PS Corey well done this year on filling the newsletter to the brim and to Dave Milnes for all your pics that you take and supply for the newsletter.

Cheers
Killer

2022 Calendar

The 2022 calendar is setup (a copy is on the next page) obviously anything can be changed, but it's a good foundation to get the year rocking along.

- Beach permits and insurance have been booked.
- Tabourie is booked.
- Currently there is no fundraising activities, except for the major raffle.
- I will contact the sponsors so it is sorted for next year.

Membership

I can't really make an official call on membership as I won't be Pres next year, but the committee has discussed offering a 50% discount to existing members.

It's been the second year in a row where we didn't complete a full season, so it's only fair to compensate members. New members would pay full price. An exact decision on this can be made after the AGM, however Darcy and I are happy to help the new committee to get the big job of membership over and done with early.

Seven Mile family trip - the Committee strongly recommends members book their spot for the seven mile family trip for 2022 as early as possible. Camping is crazy busy these days and sites should be booked early!

Seven Mile beach caravan park contact number; 4234 1340

100 club for Cerebral Palsy Alliance

Billy, who won the 2021 major raffle – a custom carabine longboard, would like to offer the board up for a 100 club raffle to raise money for children with Cerebral Palsy. The Cerebral Palsy Alliance have a local office at Feary Meadow and we have been assured the money raised will be spent locally. The goal is to raise $2000, tickets will be $20.

If we have a pointscore in November, we will sell tickets, but you can start ordering your tickets now.

Message me at coremanis@hotmail.com to choose and get your numbers in.

Congratulations to Lara for managing to surf for as long as she did. The laybacks wish Aido and Lara all the best with the birth of their first child!

Bloody Laybacks!

Layback Longboarders have had a Lifeblood team with the Wollongong Red Cross Blood donor centre for the past 10 years or so. Currently we sit just outside the Top 25 teams in the region for donations (it would be awesome to raise the bar). If anyone has ever considered donating blood (or knows someone who already does), it's pretty easy (takes about 15 minutes from door to door to donate whole blood) and you get a milkshake and snack afterwards. When you head in for an appointment, just let them know that you wish to donate to the Laybacks team. Some of our members are donating regularly (Ian and Andrew you legends!!!), and others started just recently.

Here's a brief description of how it works:

<https://www.donateblood.com.au/learn#types-of-donation>

If you book your appointment online, you can nominate the team you want to donate for!

Your team, Layback Longboarders has 6 member(s).

Total Donation this year (2021): 23

Number of lives saved this year (2021): 69

Jody WP & Lisa Moore are regular donors and love going for the snacks and milkshakes. Good on ya girls.

Secret spot number 3! This rarity was taken early this month. If you wanna know how good it was, ask Tommy Bates.

Shipwrecks

For those who've surfed shipwrecks over at Nusa Lembongan, well its name sake is back. Yep a barge got stuck there again, same that happened in the 60's and apparently its made the wave even better!

History of the re-birth of the National Old Malibu Titles!

With the advent of the short board revolution starting from late 1967 when boards dropped below 9ft for the very first time, quickly progressing down to under 7ft by 1969, the so called Malibu (longboard) era came to an end!

The National Titles were still held each year, but obviously with the current equipment of the day being used to compete on.

With the resurgence of the modern longboards in the mid to late 1980s came new longboard clubs, with monthly point scores and eventually with a yearly major comp, initially the modern new longboards were mainly around the 8ft mark and with generally minimal age divisions, mostly just a open division.

With the popularity of these new longboard clubs came the re-birth of the Old mal division, where the board criteria was original boards over 9ft, which kept out the fine to have some advantages over the original 9ft plus boards, not only in length but weight, thickness, design and performance, and rightly so.

The inaugural resurgence of the National Old Malibu Titles was held in September 1995 at Nambucca Heads on the NSW north coast, the thinking it was about half way between QLD and The NSW southern borders where it would attract most interested competitors from a logistic option.

In this inaugural event it was just a straight out Open only division, with all boards over 9ft and original, and they must have stringers, no "stringerless" boards being allowed at that time, that rule was relaxed at later time.

The accompanying photo shows the open finalists in 1995, Ian Bell and Dave Simons were 1st and 2nd, I finished in 3rd place surfing on my Gordon and Smith Floyd Smith signature model board, fourth from the right in the photo, ( I now allow Nick Farago one of the top longboarders in Australia to use that board and he has won state and National titles in recent years surfing it superbly)

The National Titles were held at Nambucca Heads in 1996 also, then a decision was made to move the Titles south to Crescent Head, a world class longboard wave potentially in the right conditions obviously.

Fortunately the Titles have been hosted by the Crescent Head club since 1997 and currently, this being well over 20 years now, with one year cancelled to huge unredable storm surf,( Thank God) and obviously another with the Covid restrictions, fortunately I have not missed a year attending and once not competing due to illness.

As popularity of the event grew it was decided to have an under 29s and over 29s divisions, also 2 board divisions, pre 1963, basically the dreaded D-fins, and the later greenough fin boards up to 1967, still the same 9ft and over with stringerless boards allowed to be used for the first time since the 60s,as you would expect as people have got older over the past 20 odd years, the divisions changed to over and under 40s, Over 60s Legends, juniors, tooth picks,okanauais and multiple log divisions to cater for the hipsters.

For me personally it has always been my favourite event all year, and as some desire drops off after competing almost 25 years now, my desire for this event is as strong as ever. Because Gordon and Smith only came to Australia in late 1965, and obviously they did not make the earlier D-Fin style boards (pre1963) here.

You are only allowed to compete on Australian made boards in that D-fin division as some American made boards were so far advanced than us at that time, it was deemed as an unfair advantage to use American made boards. This rule change came about a from a protest in 2002, about an American board ( A beautiful Hobie model) which I was using at the time from a Queensland competitor, the protest was upheld and I was banned from using that board and any American made boards since!

My D-fin of choice is a Norm Casey board made at Taren Point near Cronulla around 1963, they are the hardest old mals to ride by far because of there weight (15 kilos) and there big fin right on the tail and thick chunky rails and basically no rocker at all. They are always the boss no matter what you might think, they may allow you small moments of what seems like being in control, but they very quickly bring you back to earth and reality!

In the greenough fin division when the stringerless boards we allowed to be used after 2000, I opted to use my prized "Bobby Brown Gordon and Smth Stringless Model" rather than the Floyd Smith model with a large balsa stringer and really thin, tightly pinched rails.

I Hope this explains the re-birth of the National old Mal Titles some what, and the history behind this event.

Kind Regards,

Billy Morris.

What does the ocean floor off Bellambi look like? And why should we bother?

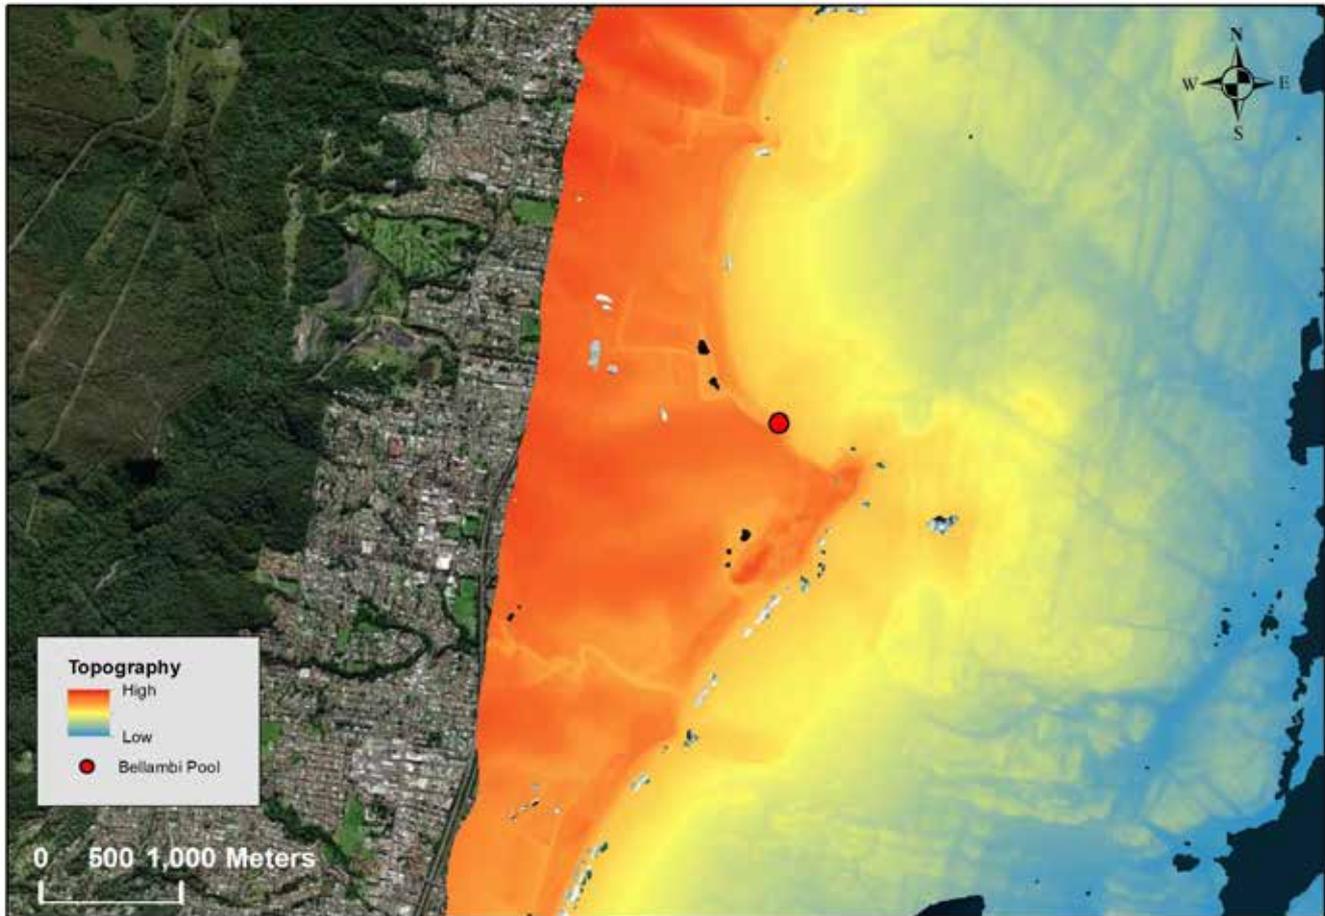

Working on my PhD research at the University of Wollongong, I recently came across this interesting data set of underwater topography which the NSW government has collected and published in 2018. Topographic data (land elevation) has been collected for many years, however, continuous maps of underwater topography (called “bathymetry”) are relatively new. Its fancy stuff, the data is remotely collected via LiDAR (Light Detection and Ranging) and LADS (Laser Airborne Depth Sounding) from an Air Cessna plane. To put it simple, someone flies with an airplane over an area, sends down millions of laser beams, which reflect from surfaces (e.g. trees, rocks, building), as well as the ocean floor. This data is then processed into what you can see in the maps below.

I am using this spatial data as an input for my modelling of tides and sea-level rise in estuaries like Lake Illawarra, Minnamurra River or the Shoalhaven River. Loading the data on my laptop, procrastination got me - what does the ocean floor off Bellambi look like – can we identify the reef of the pool – the bommie – and how shallow is the water out there really? Have a look yourself at the two maps below:

I find it fascinating to explore places via such data and maps – it’s basically the fancy version of old navigational charts – just better and with so much more details. I have to admit I can sometimes loose myself in that stuff. The top map shows shallow water depths with purple colours and dark blue colours, and deep water with light blues (down to 25 m water depth). Bellambi Pool is marked with the red dot. The reef surrounding the pool really stands out, and one can nicely imagine how waves peel along the purple reef. The bommie also shows up nicely in dark blue, as well as the channel running between the pool and the bommie in light blue. So how deep is it at the bommie? Well, mostly around 3 metres (around 2-2.5 metres during low tide), which is why only large waves break out there. With that level of detail, one can explore surf spots from a scientific point of view – e.g. how long is a section of the reef that may offer good surf, which is the ideal swell direction, how big have the waves to be (e.g. a 1 m wave breaks in approximately 1.3m deep water), etc.

I think even more fascinating is the 2nd map, which shows topography (land) in red/ orange colours and the bathymetry (ocean) in yellowish / blue colours. It's almost like an artistic painting. The headlands and reefs off Towragi and Bulli stick out in orange, and it's beautiful to check all these linear structures in the offshore reefs on the seafloor that look like a blocks of reef with deeper water running in between. And one can see some paleo-channels (old river beds) where water was flowing when sea level was much lower thousands of years ago (e.g. check out the meandering [bending] blue line far offshore that may have been connected to Bellambi Lagoon and Towragi Creek).

Now you may wonder – ok, lots of money to collect that data from government money – why do we need to know so much about the ocean floor? Well, the data is used for several purposes. For example, for navigational charts or also to understand pathways of sediment transport. By looking at reef structures under water, scientists can understand and model where sand comes from and where it goes. When a storm hits the coastline and erodes part of the dune, the sand doesn't disappear offshore. Usually it's being transported elsewhere, and by studying bathymetry we can understand where it is going – and manage the coastline better. Also, all kind of computer modelling of coastal processes (wave, storms, tides, tsunamis, etc.) need such bathymetry data as an input.

I hope you enjoy the colours as much as I do!

McCombie's RETRO

Hi all, How good were the 80s! I picked this board up somewhere between 1985 and present I can't quite remember because i am old. Anyway a bit about this channel bottom thruster first time I rode it was south end of woo town had a blast on it until I took one on and come off second best dislocating my thumb, To those who know me you would think what's new!! So I stuck it in the roof and didn't get it back in the water till early this year and again had a great time on it and this time no injuries, so I thought I better make it water tight and surf it a lot more. In 1995 the poster boy for this model was Tom Carroll winning two world pro titles on Phil's boards.

A surfing Journey of a middle-aged woman – by Donna Brown

Growing up in the western suburbs of Sydney- surfing was never going to be easy. I suppose I was lucky; my family loved the ocean and the water. We were the quintessential Aussie family living in the burbs. We had a nice red brick home with a big above ground pool. Like most kids- life was full of adventure. We left the house early and came back when the streetlights came on. Yep, we were that family. Streets full of kids, playing every form of sport and game you can imagine- street cricket, Billy carts, knock n run, push bikes, horses, road handball, skateboarding, and swimming at the local pools. The biggest hurdle for a young kid in those years – was getting to the beach. This adventure happened every single weekend with a trip down the coast to Bulli/ Sandon point/Seven Mile beach to our caravan, or any beach my dad wanted to fish at !! yes, he was an avid fisherman, and an ex-Lifesaver. My Brother introduced me to surfing as a young 10-year-old. He loved surfing- being my big brother he would take me along (under duress) although most times he left pre-dawn, so I often missed out. My brother is sadly passed away but ive kept his original board ... one day I may have it restored .

I grew up looking at Tracks / surfing life and idolizing the surfing world- without living in it- let's face it, we were westies living so far from the water you could not see it, or taste it , or hear it. Every weekend and every holiday we made our escape – up or down the coast – anywhere to the ocean.

Surfing as a kid from the western suburbs was always going to be a challenge- especially as I was also a tiny girl as well! As a teenager travelling to Bondi ,Maroubra and Cronulla on the train to the beach was fraught with danger- feeling like a leper (scene from Puberty Blues) . Therefore, my surfing desire was put on hold – for the next 25 years in fact. I dabbled a few times during this time – Berrara , Seven Mile beach & Sussex inlet when I was 16, however once again- this wasn't something young girls did- in fact I was one of the only girls and soon lost my courage, and sat in the back stalls as they say watching my boyfriends instead whilst working on my TAN 😊

Fast forward to 25 years and I was living in my dream home in Wombarra with my hubby & two small kids and the big 40 staring me down.... I decided it was now or never. I joined up with a girl's surf day and was HOOKED! I'd found my happy place. I met a group of like-minded friends that I am still surfing with today. As a small group we've enjoyed surfing at Bendy with Pam Burrige – where she gave us some great tips and encouragement.

Over the years, I like most surfers (that's still hard to say aloud) have had many boards and surfed many places. I've been lucky enough to surf some lovely breaks around the world as well – Maldives, Bali, Taiwan, and up and down the coast. However, I love my local breaks- most weekends you will find me at Sharkeys , a wave that my girlfriends and I once had to ourselves several days a week- otherwise known as “the ladies lounge”.

Last weekend after my husband snapped his beloved Mctavish 8 ball- we decided to clean out our boards. I have many that I no longer surf- probably because I'm older and not as fit, however it was great to see them again. I dusted them off and contemplated selling them (a moment of madness) alas this wasn't to be- I packed them back up and stored them away- unable to part with them. All whilst knowing that I will probably never surf them again. Not sure what you call that disorder???

Which brings me to here an now... listening to the ocean and hoping the swell drops a bit for this middle age woman. Hoping to see my friends in the ocean soon and looking forward to catching up at Bellambi Board riders- Listening to GB daily update. Realising how lucky we are to live here and feeling thankful that I joined the club (when I had literally only ridden a longboard for about a minute) and feeling totally out of my depth and out of my comfort zone. Surfing with an established crew from Bellambi was/ is intimidating to say the least. I am so grateful to the committee and everyone in the club for being so welcoming. I like everyone else, is looking forward to our next get together/ surf /BBQ/ social event.

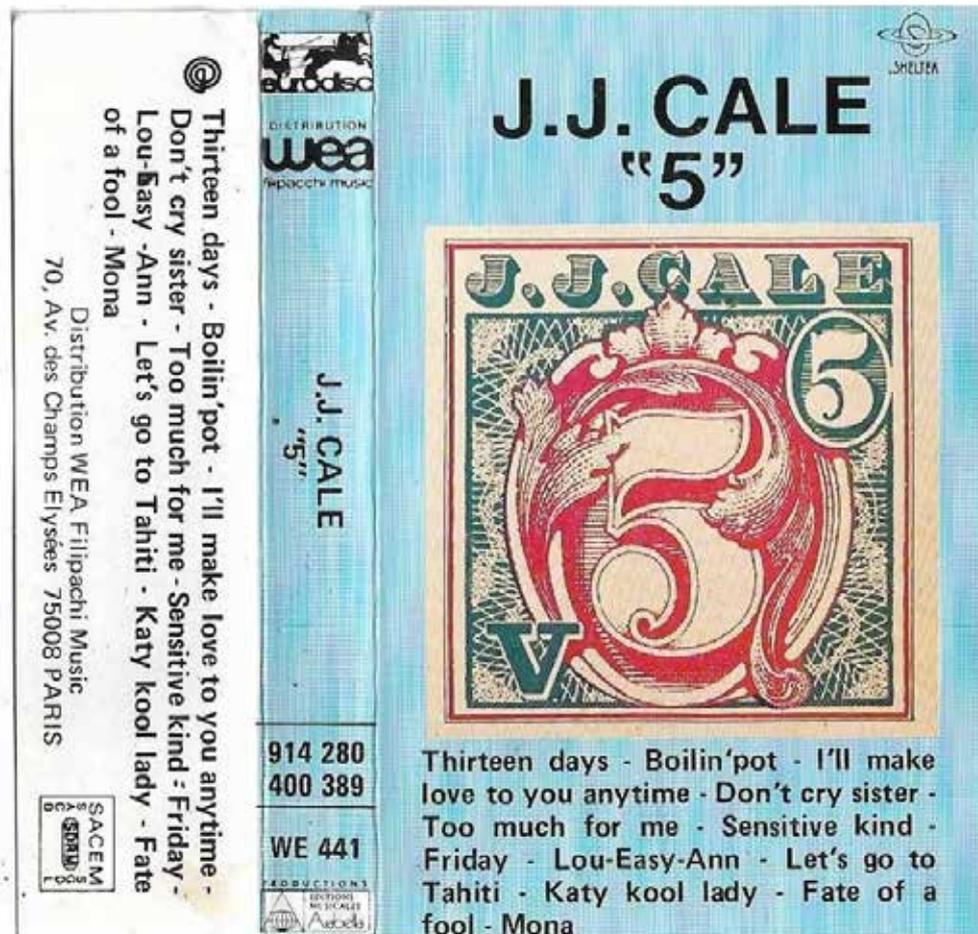

So that's my story- I may be a middle-aged woman, however I'm loving my surfing and I hope I can continue doing so for years to come. See you all out there.

Here are some pictures of some of my boards and me surfing last week at Sharkeys Cheers & stay safe everyone – Donna

Album Review – J.J Cale “5”

Well as you can see by the track listing on the jewel cassette, J.J Cale was a bloody horny bastard during this period of recording. It was Mal and Goldie that opened my eyes to J.J Cale and I'll be forever grateful for the impact their influence has had. For me J.J Cale is close to that Neil Young kina pedestool, probably more overlooked in my generation than Young, but of the same genre and having that similar kinda vibe, maybe just a little less prairie and more blues than young. But his timelessness and ability to take you to another realm is there. J.J Cale is cruisey and deep, bluesey and cool, he can funk you up or trip you out. J.J Cale is the man.

Shane looking his furriest best! go say g'day and get a sick board.
